VOLUME II No. 28

Keeping an eye on the weather

Minden weatherman Phil Graham checks the temperature at the weather station behind his North Water Street home. Phil had been recording Haliburton County weather for the past 33 years and says that despite what people may think, the weather from year to year remains basically the same.

"Everyone talks about the weather but no one does anything about it."

While Minden resident Phil Graham, who supplies The Times with monthly statistics on weather in the community, may not be able to "do something" about the weather, if you want to know about the climatological forces which shape our lives daily, he is the man to see.

Phil has been collecting weather statistics in Haliburton County since 1947. In recognition of his long service to the cause of weather observation, Phil has been given an award of merit by Environment Canada, the federal agency responsible for charting and forecasting the weather across the country. Phil is one of seven volunteer weather observers in Ontario who received the award.

Phil joined the ranks of the volunteer weather observers shortly after World War Two.

"I always had an interest in the weather," he commented, "and received training in weather observation and recording during my wartime stint in the Air Force." The Grahams lived in the Clergy House on South Water Street, when, in 1947, Phil responded to an advertisement in the newspaper for a weather observer.

With his previous training and interest he was named an observer for the Minden area. The family moved to Haliburton Village for a brief period and the role of observer moved with them. A short time later they returned to Minden where he continued to record the daily fluctuations in the weather. The couple now live on North Water Street, across the Gull River from their former home.

In their back yard a small white shuttered enclosure, about the size of a dog house on stilts, hold the two thermometers that register the high and low temperatures each day.

The thermometers are of special design. One follows the rise of temperature each day until it peaks. Rather than retracting as normal thermometers do when the temperature drops, the liquid in the device holds the highest level, giving a reading of the maximum for the day. The second thermometer operates in a similar manner except in reverse, recording the lowest temperature each day.

A rain gauge completes the recording equipment on the back lawn.

In addition to taking the temperature readings twice daily, at 7:45 a.m. and 5:15 p.m., and the precipitation level when necessary, he also makes visual observations of each day's weather. The book

Surveys show core merchants favour BIA

The survey of Minden downtown merchants has so far indicated a positive response to the possibility of establishing a Business Improvement Area (BIA) in this municipality.

According to township councillor Stu Brandon, 53 surveys were circulated two weeks ago in conjunction with an information meeting held at the community centre. As of Monday, 33 responses have been received by the municipal office and 29 of these indicate the merchants are in favour of the proposal.

At least 66% of the merchants within the area defined as downtown need to indicate their approval for the program before the first steps can be undertaken in establishing the redevelopment program here.

According to the councillor, the municipal staff is continuing to urge those merchants who have not returned their forms to do so.

It is likely that a by-law, formally establishing the BIA for the core area of Minden, will be passed at the next meeting of the municipal council which is scheduled for May 14. The enacting of the by-law is the first step in a lengthy process which must be undertaken before a redevelopment program can begin. Those merchants opposed to any program to redevelop the core area of the community will have up to sixty days after the by-law is enacted to express their dissatisfaction with the plan. The objections will be considered at an Ontario Municipal Board hearing.

The passing of the by-law will also mean a committee, consisting of core merchants and at least one member of the township council, will be formed to assist in the formulation of plans for the redevelopment of the core area.

Councillor Brandon, who is also a merchant in the proposed BIA, said he was very pleased with the response to the surveys. He noted that the number of merchants who have so far indicated they are in favour of the project represent a majority. He said he hoped that those with surveys would return them as soon as possible. Last Friday was the suggested deadline for the return of the forms.

Students take over newspaper

The Times office was invaded by school children again this past week.

The students, part of the grades four and five classes at Archie Stouffer Elementary School, were participating in a project on community awareness. Included in the studies were visits to a Haliburton County Council meeting, Anson, Hindon and Minden Township Council meeting, the regular sittings of the Provincial Court and a number of other institutions in the municipality, including this newspaper.

While the first group to visit our office several weeks ago were on tour, the smaller group this past week were here to work. Under the direction of editors Corry Ziorjen and Chris Bunker the youngsters had prepared articles and items of interest gathered in their study of the community.

The students wrote, edited, laid out, took and developed the photographs, drew the pictures and planned the details of the centre two pages of this week's newspaper.

The project also helps to bring to people's attention the fact that this is Education Week in Ontario. Archie Stouffer Elementary School will be hosting an open house Wednesday evening for parents and others interested in the activities taking place at the school.

Acid rain impact study

Haliburton County could be one of the areas studied in Ontario to determine the socio-economic impact of acidified precipitation.

Details of the study, and the fact this county may be one of several areas in the province to be included in the Ministry of Environment study, is contained in a letter to the president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers Association, Bert Shingler. The letter was sent by Dr. J. A. Donnan, a senior economist with the Ministry of the Environment.

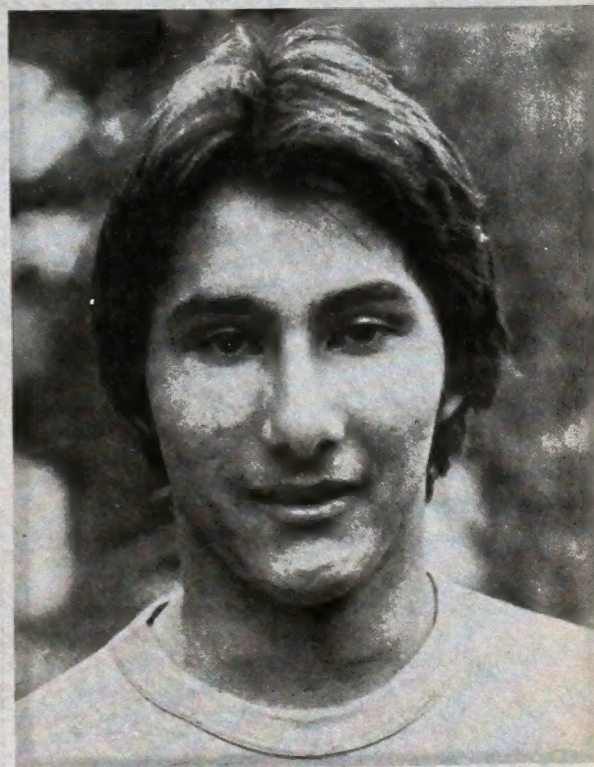

According to the ministry official, "The objective of the socio-economic study is to gain an appreciation of the value that individuals and society in general will assign to the damages and adverse effects of acid rain."

The spokesman points out that some of the impacts can be measured in dollars and cents. He referred to such items as damage to buildings or the loss to commercial fishermen from the increased acidity, as two examples of identifiable losses. He also noted that the drop in tourism and outdoor recreation revenues could also fall into this category.

However, Donnan noted that acid rain is also creating problems which cannot be easily measured in financial terms. "...the loss of sports fisheries, the extinction of

FROM THE CHAMBER

By Bob Stinson

The warm summer weather experienced this weekend, and it's accompanying resurgence of tourist activity found many of us attempting to analyse what is in store for us this summer. One resort operator reported, with genuine concern, that they had just received a cancellation from a family in Windsor as a result of lay-offs in the automotive industry. The operator felt this was a sign of things to come.

We were reminded of the lumber dealer in Toronto who in the late fifties became convinced that another depression was imminent. He cut back on all his own promotional spending, pared his inventory and even reached the point of talking customers out of their planned projects because "after all we are heading into a depression!" In a way the man was right. He had his depression and went bankrupt. Of course his competition, not knowing any better, continued to do business in an aggressive manner and because they failed to recognize the depression are still in business today.

This is not, of course, to say that we should ignore all economic signs and factors that dictate our business future. It does suggest, however that we should attempt to look at them in a positive way. The energy crunch continues to work in our favour by encouraging more people to holiday closer to home and Americans to take advantage of our dollar and gasoline prices. Traditional patterns are changing and bear watching. There will be less "touring" of the country, with more emphasis on destination vacations. Trailer parks and motels will have to adjust to this trend. Visitors are becoming more "action" conscious, and are interested in facilities to keep them occupied while on vacation. They are demanding more and more modern, up-to-date, facilities. Shorter vacations also seem to be the trend at commercial resorts.

One thing is very evident. With life in the big cities becoming more complicated, and pressures of business increasing people are looking at vacations as an absolute necessity, rather than a luxury, and regardless of how tight things become economically they are going to insist on "getting away from it all". The successful resort area will see to it that this need is satisfied.

Ontario Chamber convention
The Ontario Chamber of Commerce will hold their annual convention in Toronto on May 11, 12 and 13. Our President, John Hogg will be attending representing not only our Chamber, but all of District 21 in his capacity as a director on their board.

A half-day of the convention is set aside for debating and ratifying the "Provincial Recommendations" that have been submitted by individual Chambers across Ontario. This year over 50 submissions have been proposed and those accepted at the convention will form the issues the Ontario Chamber will attempt to impress on the Ontario Government. Some indication of the credibility this organization possesses at Queen's Park is indicated by the fact that every provincial Cabinet Minister asked to be given an opportunity to address the delegates during the course of the convention.

Haliburton has submitted two recommendations. We have asked that the province once again assume the role of licensing trailer parks for the sake of continuity. We are also asking that "governments place a high priority on funding for research to improve our technology for dealing with acid rain both at the source and at the point of impact" and that I.N.C.O. be forced to comply with existing emission regulations.

Welcome

The Cupboard, the unique general store that has been servicing the many needs of Blairhampton folks for so many years has been sold to Andy and Sylvia Campbell. They have moved here from St. Catharines but are no strangers since Sylvia was raised here in Haliburton County and Andy cottaged on Horsehoe Lake with his family for many years. We wish Andy and Sylvia (nee McCracken) success and regretfully say goodbye to Henry and Peggy Heuss who are returning to their former home town of Kitchener. We know they'll be back for visits.

We would also like to welcome Dr. Ken Hadley, Optometrist, who has joined the Chamber and is expanding his practice to full time in Haliburton village adjacent to the Board of Education offices. We also understand Ken is being married this weekend and we wish them both well.

Congratulations and good wishes are in order for Prentice Roads who have now expanded their operation to include marine supplies with the acquisition of the O.M.C. franchise for their area.

At one time or another, we've probably all used the expression "as dead as a dodo" without ever thinking of the statement's true meaning. The clumsy, flightless dodo is one of the birds driven to extinction by the history of man. It joins the ranks of other plants and animals, such as the great auk and the passenger pigeon, which will never again grace our earth's landscape.

Extinction of entire species has always been a part of this planet's natural history. Even the great families of dinosaurs, which ruled supreme for millions of years, came to a natural end. But man's activities have accelerated that process tremendously, and our industrialized society is pushing more and more species to the brink of no return.

World-wide, 25,000 species of plants and animals are thought to be in immediate danger of extinction. Unless dramatic steps to save our genetic resources are taken, an estimated 600,000 species could disappear by the end of the century. Right now we still have healthy populations of most types of wildlife in North America, but the symptoms of concern for tomorrow are already clear. The 1980 Blue List, which serves notice of birds that are not yet endangered but are steadily declining across the continent, lists 73 species which warrant our concern.

Does all this really make any difference to you and I? Perhaps not directly, unless you happen to be a birdwatcher who thrills to the sight of an Eskimo curlew. But in a broader vein, every species contributes to the functioning of a natural ecosystem, and every species, unique fish populations in some lakes, and the possibility of an increased risk to human health," the letter pointed out are some of these problems.

"These losses are very real to those who sustain them and to society in general, but it is difficult to assign a quantitative weight or value to these effects," the letter points out.

The spokesman admitted that assessing these losses will be more difficult than calculating the monetary loss created by acid rain, but pointed out that different methods and approaches would have to be used. He indicated that a survey of residents in an area being affected by acid rain, "could determine just how people value the environmental resources that are potentially at risk by acid precipitation and other kinds of pollution." Such a survey would also assist in determining how many people were aware of the acid rain problem.

The spokesman indicated that the survey area has not yet been identified but that the Muskoka-Haliburton district is one under consideration. In addition the following areas are being considered for the study: Parry Sound, Sudbury and its environs, Killarney Provincial Park, and Kenora-Quetico Provincial Park area.

Bert Shingler, the President of the cottagers' association, has stated that his organization will be co-operating and supporting the ministry in its efforts to assess the impact of acid rain on the province.

including man, depends on that ecosystem for survival. When we reduce the diversity of life-forms contributing to the stability of the system as a whole, we diminish our own future options. ion.

An increasing loss of species is an early warning that all is not well with our treatment of this planet. We now have been well and truly warned. The question is whether we will be courageous enough to take the steps necessary to stem this rising tide of extinctions.

Tennis anyone? How about badminton or ping-pong?

Enthusiasts in these particular sports may soon have a club to call their own in the Minden area. An initial assessment of the interest in the area indicates there are enough people to form a club so the first steps in that direction are to be taken May 27.

Jeff Lodenquai is spearheading the drive to form the raquets club. "I would like to bring together people interested in these sports," he commented. He suggested that the club members could organize tournaments with other communities or within the local group, and would be forum for players of like interests to exchange ideas.

The club, which could be divided into the three divisions noted above, will be open to all age groups.

"At the moment there is badminton on Monday and Thursday evenings at the elementary school," Lodenquai pointed out. Mrs. Bruna Foran has been responsible for organizing that activity. He noted that tennis is restricted to the warmer months of the year and already has an active following at the courts near the arena.

"We have also secured the use of the auditorium at Hyland Crest during the evening for a six month trial period," Lodenquai stated. "We will be using it for the ping-pong tables."

According to the organizer the first meeting will determine how many individuals in the community are interested in the club. Group leaders for each of the three sections will also be chosen and any members of the group who have the ability to instruct novices will be asked to organize classes.

"We really just want to determine what the people in the community, who are interested in badminton, tennis or ping-pong would like to get out of a club like this," Lodenquai said. Everyone is invited and we urge those interested to bring their ideas for future activities."

The meeting is scheduled to take place May 27 at Archie Stouffer Library from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Anyone requiring more information should contact Jeff Lodenquai at 286-2001.

April weather

Average high	11.4

Highest temperature (April 7)	18.5
Lowest temperature (April 17)	-10

The month was fairly pleasant, much on the average with last April. The main difference however was that during the same month last year we experienced 35 cm or 14 inches of snowfall and snow on the ground until April 14. This past month there was no snow on the ground. Although the precipitation included some very light snow, most of it during the month came in the form of rain.

The weatherman

in which he records the temperatures also includes notations as "sunny and warm" or "cloudy and windy".

At the end of each month these statistics are forwarded to the regional headquarters in Toronto where they are used to piece together the provincial weather picture for the month. These statistics, while of passing interest, or useful as conversation starters, with the average member of the community, can be vitally important to those involved in agriculture, certain kinds of commerce and industry.

For example, the weather patterns for the month of February across the province can be used to give an indication of the amount of fuel oil consumed in heating buildings. Or, agricultural experts can predict the success of a particular crop by analysing the temperatures experienced during a critical germination period.

In addition to the daily weather observations, Phil has also been named one of a number of observers of severe weather in the province. When such phenomena as localized tornadoes, ice storms or hurricane-type weather is observed in Minden, Phil has the responsibility of alerting the regional headquarters in Toronto immediately. These observations assist in warning others in the patch of a potentially dangerous, but localized storm, of its existence.

Through his 33 years of watching and recording the weather Phil has been able to note that no matter what people say about the weather, it really doesn't change that much from year to year. "Looking back through the years for a particular month," he comments, "you'll find that the average temperature, the average amount of rainfall and the amount of sunshine versus cloud, has remained the same. The temperatures are within a few degrees and the inches of precipitation are equally close." He notes that that talk of "those severe winters of years ago" just don't exist in the records he has maintained since 1947.

Phil points out that people tend to remember the extremes, the few days of frigid temperatures or that downpour that flooded everyone's basement. While these create an impression of weather extremes, on a monthly basis they are generally moderated by "average" weather that no one seems to recall.

Obviously, Phil has had to have an intense interest in the weather to have maintained his voluntary service for 33 years. However, he does admit that at times the twice daily readings have been a nuisance. After all, who would want to crawl out of a warm bed on a blustery Saturday morning to take the readings? Leaving town on holidays or business also means Phil and his wife Jane, who shares the duties, have to find someone to tend to their duties.

However, taking the readings each day has become part of their daily routine and chances are it would be missed.

Phil may not be able to do anything about the weather as it unfolds around us each day, but at least the community can be assured that an accurate daily record of climatological data is being maintained for Minden.

Ontario: Let's all pitch in Ontario in spring-time is beautiful when it is not marred by the scrubby look of winter's leftover litter. The thoughtless, throw-away habits of a few people can spoil it for others at a time when our countryside is once again ready for full warm weather enjoyment.

Fortunately, many community-minded people care about this and want to help keep Ontario beautiful.

The 19,000 members of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, for example, assisted by the Ministry of the Environment, are staging PITCH IN DAY on Saturday, June 7th. Anglers and Hunters all over Ontario are organizing special environmental PITCH IN projects to clean-up litter and junk from streams, shorelines, rural roads and trails, picnic areas and campsites and other areas which lack regular litter collection services.

You can help to fight pollution all year long.

Start by joining a PITCH IN project in your area.

Then, PITCH IN to Keep Ontario Beautiful. We all benefit when you do.

Editorial

Let the people decide

While we share the concern of all Canadians over the possible outcome of the Quebec referendum, we cannot allow the assessment of Victoria-Haliburton MP Bill Scott to pass without comment. (See 'Report from Parliament' on this page.)

Scott claims that the referendum "has no basis in law, it has not been legitimized by an act of the federal Parliament and it is clearly unconstitutional."

We are not in a position to assess the legitimacy of the referendum called by Premier Rene Levesque. That sort of interpretation should be done by constitutional experts and learned jurists who understand the fine points of Canadian and British legal tradition and the application of the British North America Act in this situation.

Certainly, if the referendum is "illegal" the federal government, which a few months ago was being led by Mr. Scott's own party, should have challenged it long before now. If the vote taking place in Quebec is unconstitutional, the federal government, by not acting, has allowed it to become legitimate by refraining from any challenge to its existence. Furthermore, any plan to challenge the referendum after the fact, no matter what the outcome, will be nothing more than sour grapes.

Scott's references to "bombings, kidnappings and other acts of lawlessness" will only heat up an already inflamed situation. These are blatant scare tactics of the worst kind. They play on the emotions of those outside of the province, the very same people who should be listening and watching what is being said with reason.

It appears that Scott is offering only two options for Quebec, a separation if the 'yes' side wins or an orgy of bombing and violence if they lose. While the 'yes' force will be disappointed following the referendum, we believe that the majority of them realize there is nothing to be gained by senseless violence.

The rest of Canada does not have to endorse what Rene Levesque has espoused for his province, but we must certainly recognize that he has employed a traditionally democratic method to achieve his ends. It may have been foolhardy to attempt a coup, or to declare independence for his province, but these options, as farfetched as one might think they are, were open to the Parti Quebecois in the last few years.

The referendum campaign has been vitriolic and caustic. However, the principles of a referendum, "a polling of the wishes of the populace" have been adhered to. On several occasions minor acts of violence have marred the campaign, but the referendum has generally been conducted in an orderly and peaceful manner.

Scott suggests in a rather sinister tone that, "...separatists number in the millions, are extremely well organized and are aided and abetted by the government of the province... (that they are not) just a handful of fringe-area lunatics... (who) have grown into a powerful force in Quebec... (who) control the provincial government, are well organized and have money and power."

If Canadians believe in the democratic traditions on which our nation was founded, then they should be willing to accept the wishes of a majority of Quebecois in deciding their own future. If, as Scott suggests, separatists number "in the millions" it points to two things. First there is little Canadians can do between now and the time the vote is taken to change their opinion. And secondly, that the residents of the other nine provinces in Canada have failed their fellow citizens miserably in Quebec if millions feel they would be better off without us. If the assessment that there are millions

Spring tassels

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

by William C. Scott, M.P.

In just three weeks from now Quebec voters will go to the polls to cast their votes, either 'yes' or 'no' in that province's referendum on sovereignty association.

During these last weeks of the referendum campaign the momentum has been building, and so has the bitterness and alienation.

In many areas of the province, communities have been divided down the middle, with neighbors of many years or even decades being turned into bitter enemies. Even families are being split up over the deep divisions that have developed between the 'yes' and 'no' camps.

The Quebec referendum is a tragedy of major proportions, and it should never have been allowed to grow into such a major and divisive issue. It has no basis in law, it has not been legitimized by Act of the federal Parliament, and it is clearly unconstitutional.

While the leaders of the two factions in the referendum campaign have been hurling their charges and counter-charges as to whether federalism is good or bad for Quebec, they have studiously avoided the main issue in the whole question of the referendum.

They have not even mentioned the fact that the federal government's acceptance of the legitimacy of the referendum places both Quebec and English Canada in a "no win" situation.

Whichever side wins the referendum vote, the bitterness and hatred that have been directed against the Canadian federal system, and against English Canadians, will not simply go away after the referendum vote. It will remain, and may even be increased, depending on which side wins. It is something that we are going to have to be prepared to deal with.

If the 'yes' side wins the referendum vote, Premier Levesque will interpret it as a mandate to take Quebec out of Confederation. Both the federal government and the premiers of the other provinces have already stated categorically that they will not negotiate sovereignty association between Quebec and the rest of Canada. This will force Levesque to take the course that he really has in mind to begin with, and that is separation.

The London Times said in an editorial that a "yes" vote in the Quebec referendum would result in a "Broken-backed Canada", and the Dallas Times Herald said that a "yes" vote "would weaken the Canadian Confederation beyond repair".

Those who believe that a win by the "No" forces would settle the issue are not being realistic. There is already clear evidence that violence and intimidation will increase in Quebec as the referendum date approaches.

Many people, both in Quebec and elsewhere in Canada, believe that if the 'yes' forces are defeated, they will launch a vicious campaign of reprisal against the federalists in Quebec and outside that province as well. We should not forget the bombings, kidnappings, and other acts of lawlessness carried out by a small band of FLQ terrorists in Quebec on 1970.

The separatists today number in the millions, and they are extremely well organized, and they are being aided and abetted by the government of their province.

The hard-core members and followers of Rene Levesque and his Parti Quebecois are not just a handful of fringe-area lunatics. In the past ten years they have grown into a powerful force in Quebec. They control the provincial government, they are well organized, and they have money and power. They are dedicated to the destruction of Confederation, and whether Quebecers vote 'yes' or 'no' in the referendum, the Parti Quebecois will remain a powerful and determined force to reckon with.

of separatists in Quebec is true, it would be fair to say that the reason for their existence lies not in that province but in the rest of Canada.

We do not favour the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada. That province is as vital to the rest of Canada as the other nine provinces and territories are to it. However, we are not prepared, and do not feel the rest of the country should be, to deny the aspirations of the people of Quebec, legitimately expressed in a fair and open referendum. To do otherwise would be to deny our own democratic traditions and inevitably lead to the confrontation Bill Scott has predicted.

REPORT FROM QUEEN'S PARK

By John Eakins, M.P.P.

Both Opposition finance critics have given their parties' formal response to the Provincial budget brought down on April 22. In his reply, David Peterson (Lib., London Centre) tabled a non-confidence motion saying the government's "failure to implement an economic strategy has contributed significantly to the economic decline of Ontario." He accused the Treasurer of budget which does not address the serious economic problems facing the province. Referring to measures to aid pensioners, which he described as "goodies", he pointed out that these will result in less money, compared to property tax credits on income tax returns, for some 135,000 senior citizens. Some people will get $100 a year less, while some wealthier pensioners will get up to $450 a year more.

In addition, he said the budget ignores the 340,000 unemployed people in this province, doesn't provide enough for research and development and fails to stimulate energy conservation measures. "The Treasurer is no Robin Hood," he said, "his program befits the Sheriff of Nottingham much better."

Chrysler of Canada and the federal and provincial government continue to try to negotiate details of a $200 million aid program for the financially troubled auto company following its parent company's announcement that it plans to buy rather than build its new V6 engine. This news is a devastating blow for the town of Windsor where Chrysler Canada planned to produce the engine. Both federal and provincial governments insist that Chrysler must guarantee at least 14,500 Canadian jobs if the company expects to receive government money. The whole idea of the proposed financial aid is to save Canadian jobs, not the auto company.

seemed to disappear," he said. "What was really happening was the bottom of the tank had been eaten away and the waste poured into it was simply disappearing below."

Dr. Smith renewed a call for a judicial inquiry into the dump's operations, a demand he first made a year ago after the Ministry of the Environment admitted it couldn't account for about 500,000 gallons of waste that had entered the plant gates.

Letters

Editor:

I wish to correct a statement made in a letter to the editor from me, appearing in the April 30 edition. The letter referred to County Council's discussion with regard to liming of the lakes. In the letter I stated that Sweden had practically abandoned their liming program.

This is an incorrect statement and I am now advised that they have not given up on their liming of the lakes, but have altered their earlier philosophy in this regard. Because of the prolonged and vast damage done to their lakes, the government is still continuing to spend large sums in an effort to combat the acid rain; a decision which satisfies public demand.

However, there is said to be some misgivings in the scientific community which believes that the only answer lies in international control of emissions into the atmosphere. Such control seems to be difficult to achieve among the industrial nations of Europe, thus Sweden, which has for long been subjected to atmospheric fall out, is faced with a most difficult decision.

A.F. Stevenson,
R.R. 1, Haliburton.

Editor's note:

The following was sent to Harry Parrott the Ontario Minister of the Environment.

Dear Mr. Parrott:

It was with great concern we read of Haliburton County Council's irresponsible resolution regarding the dumping of lime into area lakes and rivers.

The idea was presented that cottagers would support this action financially or otherwise.

The Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations Inc. wishes to go on record as stating it does not support this resolution in any way, shape or form.

The Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations does support the Ministry of Environment in its endeavours and continued research into the problem. It also advocates the use of specific abatement legislation in the short run, and the expenditure of provincial and federal funds to produce long term alternative solutions including abatement on an international level.

J. G. Strickland,
President.

Editor:

I believe that my colleagues and I have found a solution to the Iranian "hostage" crisis that will appeal to the wisdom and judgement of the U.S. Administration and, as well, cannot be rejected by the Khomeini regime in Tehran.

In the aftermath of his aborted rescue attempt, President Carter must now use his power to reduce this crisis from menacing political and military proportions to a problem of simple legal measures. All the President's State Department (led now by Ed "Don't Cry Out Loud" Muskie) would do is revoke the American citizenship of the hostages. If they are no longer U.S. citizens, who could care about them? One of my beefier confreres has suggested furthermore that the State Department draw up a deportation order "removing" the hostages from the U.S. soil of the embassy retroactive to the date of its seizure. In light of the terrorists' dispersal of the captives to points throughout Iran, this action would brilliantly punctuate the revocation order. Moreover, it neatly delivers the problem into the hands of the Iranians.

Looking forward to hearing any of your practical ideas concerning this matter, I am,

Ian A.N. Sainsbury,
Chairman,
The Lutterworth Think Tank.

Hamilton's magic box

It seems clear that literally hundreds of thousands of gallons of liquid industrial waste at a Hamilton dump leaked through a large split in a holding tank in 1978 and was only discovered after six months by a police investigation. Charges have not been pressed against the company managing the site by the Ministry of the Environment because a certificate of approval didn't expressly disallow the dumping of liquid waste, according to a ministry spokesman.

Liberal Leader Stuart Smith has charged that the holding tank became known as "the magic box" among workers at the dump and haulers who trucked in waste. "It was magic in that no matter how much waste a hauler put in it, the waste

Skating club selects exec.

The Minden Figure Skating Club held its annual pot luck supper Tuesday (April 29) evening at St. Paul's Anglican Church. The event marks the end of the year for the club and provides an opportunity for assessing the year's activities and to beginning planning for the coming season.

Vehicles collide

A two vehicle accident on the main street of Haliburton caused close to $1000 damage early Wednesday morning.

According to the police, a car driven by Emma Hewitt of Minden was in collision with a truck driven by Harry Howard of R.R. 2 Haliburton. Howard was reversing Highland Street when Hewitt attempted to enter an adjoining parking spot and the vehicles collided.

The Howard vehicle sustained $100 damage while the cost to repair the Hewitt car was estimated at $800.

Constable Weldon Popp investigated the accident.

Guard rails struck

A single car accident on County Road One early Sunday morning resulted in $100 damage to the guard rails and $800 damage to the vehicle.

The 1974 model car was driven by Catherine Johnson, 25, of Toronto. She was travelling west on the road when she struck the guard rails and entered the north ditch.

Constable Weldon Popp investigated the mishap.

Rock cut

An accident Sunday afternoon on Highway 519 north of Haliburton Village resulted in $1000 damage to a 1979 model car.

John S. Sobil, 23, of Bowmanville was the driver of the vehicle which left the roadway and struck a rock cut.

The accident was investigated by Constable Weldon Popp.

Police want to see you

An invitation has been extended to all Haliburton County residents to visit the OPP detachment office next week.

The open house is part of Police Week activities planned by the local detachment.

According to detachment commander Bill Bailey, personnel will be on hand to explain the activities of the force and to discuss the interests of the public with regard to policing in the county. Tours of the facilities at the Highway 35 office will also be available. (Groups are asked to contact the detachment in advance.)

Police Week in Ontario will be marked from May 11 to 17.

How to cope.

Stress is something we encounter every week of the year. But during Mental Health Week, from May 4th to the 10th, we're putting the stress on knowing how to cope with it.

Stress is a part of normal living.

And a little stress can even help individuals realize new successes or achievements.

But evidence is mounting that excessive or prolonged stress is linked to major illnesses.

So the trick is not to ignore stress.

But to understand and control it. And now, during Mental Health Week, is a good time to start.

If tension, anxiety and daily pressures start mastering you instead of the other way around, try dealing with them in a few simple ways.

Keep up your general health. Good physical condition can help you cope with stress situations.

Talk about or work out your problems. Talking and physical activity are emotional outlets which can help put problems into perspective.

Give your support to friends, family and co-workers during periods of stress. As it helps them, it can also take your mind off your own problems.

Learn some of the new methods of controlling stress. There are all kinds of techniques, from the simplest to the most sophisticated.

And finally, get more information on how you can understand and deal with stress, by writing to: Ontario Ministry of Health, Resource Centre, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ontario M7A 1S2.

After all, the more you know about stress, the better you can cope with it. And Mental Health Week is a good time to start.

Farm news & views

Dreams of a summer on the farm will become a reality this summer for about 200 young people participating in the Junior Agriculturalist Program. This program is sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food through the provincial government's Experience '80 program.

The program was designed to give young people from Ontario towns and cities an opportunity to gain practical work experience on the farms. It also gives the students a chance to gain an appreciation for rural life and farming.

During the nine-week program, from June 16 to August 16, each student lives and works on one farm. The students receive a training allowance of $12 per day.

Host farmers pay half of the allowance, and provide room and board. The Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food contributes the other $6 per day.

More than 1000 students have already applied for the 200 positions available this summer. To qualify for the program, students must be 16 or 17 years old by May 1, with no previous farm work experience. Applicants are also required to give the reasons for their interest in agriculture.

The Junior Agriculturalists help with a variety of farm chores, depending on the type of farming operation. They become part of the farm family, helping with chores, participating in 4-H and other community events.

In addition to the benefits to the students, the program provides extra help for the host farmer during the busy summer months and gives farmers a chance to work with young people who are interested in a future in food production. It is a rewarding experience for farm families to share their skills with enthusiastic young people.

As many Junior Agriculturalists come from the metropolitan Toronto area, host farms are needed as close as possible to their homes. Commercial farmers in Victoria County are especially urged to consider participating in this program this year.

Detailed information on the program and applications for host farmers are available from the Lindsay Agricultural Office.

Request denied

A request from the developer of the Peterborough Lumber property that he be excused from looking after the maintenance of the road allowance in front of the property has been turned down by township council. The action was taken at the April 23 meeting.

A letter from the developer's solicitors requested that the township tend to the maintenance of the road allowance which runs parallel to Highway 35 across the front of the property. The councillors agreed that since the original agreement with the developer stated that he would be responsible for the area in question, it would not be changed.

According to the motion passed by the council, the developer, Daniel Laing, had agreed to pave the entrance to the property, which crosses the easement. Until the pavement is in place, the council said that the developer would be responsible for maintaining the gravel portion of the entrance which is on the road allowance.

A deadline of April 30, 1981 has also been included in the agreement for the paving of the easement portion of the entrance.

Meals on the move

Senior citizens, the handicapped and others who find themselves unable to get around easily can now take advantage of a new service in the Minden and Haliburton areas.

Meals on Wheels, a program that brings piping hot meals to the home, is now in operation in these two centres. The Minden service began April 21 and the Haliburton program started earlier last month.

Meals on Wheels, which has proven to be a successful program in many other communities across the province, is co-ordinated by the Haliburton county Home Support Service, with its head office in Haliburton Village. Three times a week volunteer drivers and helpers pick up meals cooked in the kitchens at Extendicare in Haliburton and Hyland Crest in Minden, and deliver them to a list of area residents who have indicated they would like to take part in the program. The cost of the meal is $1.50.

Co-ordinator for the program in the county is Marie Wallace who works out of an office in the Dysart municipal building. Along with a secretary, Willie Cox, they are the only two paid members of the organization at the moment. "We rely very heavily on volunteers in various communities for the Meals on Wheels and other programs," Marie commented.

The meals delivered to the homes of seniors and others provide a number of services over and above the actual delivery of ready to eat food. The regular visits provide a contact for those confined to their homes. Volunteers, stopping in on a regular basis, can make sure the senior citizen is in good health.

In addition the meal, which consists of bread, meat, vegetables, potato and a dessert, ensures that our seniors are receiving a balanced diet. This can be particularly important for someone who lives alone and finds it difficult or time consuming to cook a large meal for just one person.

For those individuals requiring special diets, the menu can be altered to meet their requirements.

The meals are delivered each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at noon.

The Meals on Wheels program is just one aspect of the home support services operation in the county. The organization is also involved with volunteer driving, enabling seniors to get out to do their banking, shopping or visit the doctor. In addition, a program of friendly home visits has been established so that those individuals who may not receive company on a regular basis, have a volunteer drop around on a regular basis to share a cup of tea or coffee and companionship. During the past month the home support service also provided assistance to seniors in completing their income tax returns.

These services have been designed to enable the senior citizen to remain in his or her home longer, rather than be transferred to an institution where the cost of care is much higher. The seniors are happier in their familiar home setting and the regular visits ensures that their needs are not being ignored.

Co-ordinator Marie Wallace notes that a majority of the work being carried out by the organization is the responsibility of the volunteers. "We certainly could not offer these services without the co-operation of groups and individuals in the communities," she commented.

The service has found a source of volunteers in several church groups and will be approaching more in the community to assist with the programs. Individuals are also invited to volunteer their time in any aspect of the programs being offered.

For more information on the home support program, to volunteer or if you know of someone who might benefit from the services being offered, contact the co-ordinator or secretary at the Haliburton office. The number is 457-2941.

The Invasion

I was groping for the light switch when suddenly there was no light. All the lights in the house went out. Then when I turned around I saw two green eyes looking at me. As I walked slowly over to a table and lit a candle, the eyes disappeared.

I thought I was dreaming so I walked upstairs to go to bed. When in my room, I looked out the window, there were green eyes everywhere. I then climbed in bed and tried to go to sleep.

While I was lying there I was thinking about those eyes. Then the candle went out and the eyes appeared. Then what ever it was made a loud cry like half cat and half cow.

There was a clock on my dresser so I picked it up and threw it at the eyes. I was so scared I stayed in bed hoping the eyes would go away, but they didn't. All of a sudden the light in my room flashed off and on, and the light switch was turned off.

Each time the light came on, the eyes disappeared and when the lights went off, they would appear. Then the light went off again and stayed off. The two eyes came closer and closer to my face.

When they came too close I got my pillow and started swinging, but still they came closer until my mom came in and woke me up.

Don't Let It Happen Again!!

One day, I went to the biggest controlled shopping centre in the world. I think I went in and I slipped and slid into the flower shop. I got up and put my hand on a cactus. I started to doubt that I could ever use my hand again. The skipper of the shop praised my winning landing and hoped that I planned to travel somewhere else on my next vacation. He also said that this morning he trimmed his product, otherwise I'd have prickles in many more places than one. After this hair raising experience I was leaving his shop and prepared to enter the dining lounge, when the skipper came after me and threw a handful of mud at me and yelled, "Here's mud in your eye!" I won't do that again!!!

The elegant Hotel Splendid had experienced a number of visits by a thief who robbed the guests of money and jewels. Detective Dawson, wearing a large diamond tie-pin, took over the hotel and placed himself in one of the single rooms. After a few hours of patient waiting, there was a rap on the door. A man slipped in and then exclaimed, "Sorry - I thought this was my own room." Detective Dawson immediately arrested the man on suspicion of attempted burglary. Why?

Answer: It is highly unlikely that the man would rap on the door of his own room!

Sports Interview

The 5A-4A class is studying the history and geography of Haliburton County. Mrs. Davis arranged for us to go to The Times, the Registry Office, the County Council and the Municipal Council. While we were at The Times, Mr. Brezina and Miss Cameron showed us how the typesetting machine and two other machines worked. Mr. Brezina showed us what the darkroom was like. I think The Times was very interesting.

The Registry Office was also very interesting to see, because it had thousands of deeds and many books showing to whom the land belongs. I discovered that Haliburton County has over 9,098,000 acres.

The County Council wasn't as interesting as the other things we went to but it was beneficial to the class.

At the Municipal Council meeting, I learned much more than being at County Council meeting. It was also much more fun.

I'm looking forward to visiting the court in May!

Then on May 16 the Minden team will go to Mariposa to play them. On May 7 there will be a display in the gym for Open House.

In the gym the 7 and 8 classes distributed to the gym, pictures about school spirit. For instance there was one that said "School Spirit is having balls of fun."

Last Friday the grade 6, 7, 8 classes had a dance in the gym. When I asked some of the people that had went, they all said it was great.

Green Thumb Corner

The lowly potato is featured in the Green Thumb Corner this week. Extension Horticulturalist Sam Squire, of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, offers a series of tips on buying, planting and harvesting potatoes.

Our second contribution, from Russ Gomme of Agricultural and Horticultural Societies Branch of the ministry explains how gardeners with limited space can make the most of the area by mixing flowers and vegetables.

Spuds

The potato was introduced to Europe from South America and maintained for many years in Europe in gardens. By the class conscious, it was considered as feed for animals and those people without social status. Finally, the European aristocracy and even kings recognized the value of the potato, and ordered it cultivated by their people.

Today, this "royal treat" is grown commercially on about 18,000 hectares (45,000 acres) in Ontario. This crop is produced so economically, it is always a best buy both nutritionally and price-wise at local food markets.

In the small home garden, the therapy of nature, the garden-to-pot freshness, and the plain pleasure of growing things, may outweigh the sharp economical pencil in your overall considerations.

Here are some guidelines and methods for growing potatoes in the home garden. If the methods are new to you, try them on only part of your potato planting to see if they suit you better than your regular methods.

Seed buying and preparation

Always buy Certified or Foundation seed potatoes, identified by the Agriculture Canada tag. Regular table potatoes may be more susceptible to disease, and could be treated with sprout inhibitor. Another disadvantage is that you don't know the variety.

Small quantities of seed potatoes are available, each spring, at local garden centres, fruit markets, country stores and many farm co-op stores.

The Ontario Seed Potato Growers' Association has an extensive list of seed potatoes for sale. Most agricultural offices have a list, or you can write to the association at Box 370, Alliston, LOM 1A0, for a copy.

Five to seven kilograms (11 to 15 pounds) of tubers plant 30 metres (100 feet) of row. Expose tubers to light a couple of weeks before planting to encourage the sprouting eyes to form short, thick, green sprouts, that should emerge faster after planting.

Plant 57 to 85 grams (2 to 3 ounces) of tubers whole. Just before planting, cut larger tubers into 57-gram (2-ounce) blocky sets, with two eyes each, if possible. Protect freshly cut seed from drying winds and direct sunlight.

Planting

Sandy - loam - to - loam friable soils are preferable. Fertilize with well-rotted manure compost or sprinkle 2.3 to 2.7 kilograms (5 to 6 pounds) of 15-15-15 commercial fertilizer per 30 metres (100 feet) of row, and work in. Work the soil 20 centimetres (8 inches) deep with a rototiller or other equipment.

Mark a straight line and dig holes 10 to 13 centimetres (4 to 5 inches) deep, with a wide hoe every 30 centimetres (foot). Drop a seed piece in each hole, and cover by dragging the soil back in with your foot as you go along.

Weed control and hilling

Cultivate or hoe shallowly while weeds are very small, until the potato crop is 20 to 30 centimetres (8 to 12 inches) tall. Hilling, or pulling soil from between the rows up around the plants, may be done at this time with a hoe, disc, or furrow-type mechanical tiller attachments on a tiller. Hilling can assist in weed control, reduce chances of new tubers being exposed and sunburned, and may help protect tubers from light frosts in the fall.

Mulching is an alternative to hilling. Plant seed pieces 2.5 centimetres (1 inch) deep, and cover with 15 centimetres (6 inches) of straw, hay, or grass clippings. This provides weed control, moisture conservation, and keeps the soil cooler during droughty periods.

Garden supply stores stock dusts and sprays to protect potatoes from insects and fungus diseases. Use as directed with caution.

Potatoes require 2.5 centimetres (1 inch) of rain or irrigation per week, from tuber set until the tops begin to mature and yellow.

After the early potatoes bloom, watch for tuber sizing. Reach into the hill, and when you find an egg-sized tuber, borrow it and a few others for a nice treat, until it's worthwhile to pull the whole plant.

Boil these young, immature potatoes with their skins on, and continue this cooking practice even after the skins become thicker and mature. This ensures that you get the maximum roughage and nutrients the potato has to offer.

Protect harvested tubers from light, or they will green. Greening is not good for you. Always handle potatoes like peaches, they can't yell 'ouch', when they are hurt.

Variety suggestions

Early recommended varieties are Irish Cobbler, Warba, Jemseg, Superior, and Onaway.

In the medium category are Kennebec, Cherokee, Trent, Norchip, and Nipigon. Red-skinned varieties worth trying are Norland and Chieftain. Sebago, Netted Gem, and Belleisle are late-maturing varieties.

WARNING - If people come into your garden bowing and scraping, it is more likely they have come to take your "Royal treats" than to pay homage to you.

Postage stamp planting

If your garden space is limited, you don't have to choose between planting a flower garden or a vegetable plot. Maximize your space by growing both gardens together.

Vegetables mix with annuals and perennials well. Any small area of your garden can produce vegetables, even a one-square-metre (12-square-foot) area between flowering shrubs. These small open spaces can produce excellent quality fresh vegetables at little cost.

The key to successful homegrown vegetables is well-prepared soil. Well-drained, open spaces with full sunshine are ideal. Prune back shrubs that shade garden areas before you begin. Dig in compost, peat moss or manure to enrich the soil before planting. A simple rule of thumb to improve soil texture is to add sand to clay soils, and clay to sandy soils.

Start your garden with tomatoes, beans, onions, peppers, cucumbers and radishes. Buy seed as early as you can. When planting the seed, the general rule is to cover the seed with soil twice the seed's diameter.

Climbing vegetables, such as beans, cucumbers and tomatoes, can be trained to climb on wires or string on a back fence. You can buy plastic netting at garden centers. These climbers make excellent screens and green backgrounds to show off annual flowers.

Onions, including the sweet Spanish type, can be purchased as sets or seedlings. Plant them about 2.5 centimetres (1 inch) apart. After three weeks, pull every other onion for use as green onions.

Continue thinning the row periodically, until the onions are 10 to 12 centimetres (4 to 5 inches) apart. These onions can be left to grow to full size.

Radishes, because they are small and mature quickly, are excellent plants for small gardens. You can grow two or three crops in one season by planting the seeds over several weeks.

If you have leftover space, consider planting lettuce, beets, carrots, and herbs. Avoid the large, rambling plants, such as corn, pumpkins and watermelons.

Fertilize when the plants are 5 to 8 centimetres (2 to 3 inches) high. Use a general fertilizer without herbicides. Either use the fertilizer as a side-dressing along the rows, or sprinkle it between the plants. Apply at a rate of 0.2 kilograms per square metres (1/2 pound per 15 square feet), and rake or dig it into the soil.

Another alternative is to use a water-soluble fertilizer, such as 20-20-20. For the initial application, mix 15 millilitres (1 tablespoon) with 4.5 litres (1 gallon) of water, and water the garden. Use this solution at half-strength every other time you water the garden.

Don't over-fertilize your vegetable garden, especially tomatoes, once the plants are established: they will produce too much vegetative growth and not enough fruit.

Recycle your garden waste by making compost. If you don't have the space for a compost pile, dig the tops of radishes, carrots and other plant wastes back into the soil.

Store-bought vegetables can't match the flavour of homegrown produce, because you can pick each vegetable at the peak of its freshness and taste. This fact alone makes planting even a few vegetables worthwhile.

Wednesday, May 7, 1980

Flowers, plants and vegetables...anything that grows from the ground can be up for discussion at the regular meeting of the Minden and District Horticultural Society. The next meeting is May 6 at the Township offices, upstairs. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Local artists in Ontario show

The work of two county artisans will be included in the Ontario Crafts '80 exhibitions later this summer. Their selection came this past weekend during a regional competition at the Rail's End Gallery in Haliburton.

The work of Mary Wallace of Minden and Nancy Hubbert of Haliburton was selected by the judges for the province-wide competition. Mary Wallace also won a first prize in the judging of the batik entries. Nancy Hubbert had submitted work in the weaving category.

The exhibition and judging drew entries from throughout the central region which includes Toronto, Barrie, Peterborough, Orillia and the Haliburton area. Judges examined 73 entries, presented in slides, and reduced the number of pieces to 55. From that 55, a final 35 were selected for the Ontario Crafts '80 competition.

The judges also selected 11 prize winners in various categories from the final 35 entries. These prizes were awarded as part of the Haliburton judging. Prizes were awarded to the following entrants:

Weaving: $50 donated by Ontario Weavers and Spinners to Dini Moes of Peterborough and $25 donated by Curry Motors; a prize of $50 cash donated by the Peterborough Guild of Fine Arts was awarded to Lucille Crighton of Churchill.

Silk weaving: $50 cash donated by Simcoe County Arts and Crafts awarded to Marny Jackson of Toronto.

Pottery: $50 cash from the Haliburton Guild of Fine Arts awarded to Laurie Roland of Toronto.

Carving: $50 cash to Adam Smith of Toronto. The prize was donated by the Ontario Crafts Council, Central Region.

Quilting: $25 cash awarded to Sandra Orr of Barrie. The prize was donated by Bishop and Wilson. Nancy Trott of Barrie received $25 cash, donated by R.H. Heyes.

Jewelry: $25 cash award to Donald Stuart of Barrie. The prize was donated by Dawson and Gray.

Batik: Mary Wallace of Minden received $25. The prize was donated by the jurors.

Hanging weaving: Hey Frey of Toronto received $25 donated by the conference instructors.

The 35 pieces chosen in the final judging will be on display later this summer at three locations. They will be at the T.D. Centre in Toronto July 3-30; at the CNE art building from August 12 to September 1; and the Gairlock Gallery in Oakville from October 18 to November 16.

Nancy Hubbert is one of two county artisans who will be participating in Ontario Crafts '80 later this year. Her work was chosen during a juried exhibition last weekend.

Designs for new stamps

Qualities of imaginative design and interesting technique characterize the commemorative postage stamps devoted to gardening and rehabilitation to be issued by Canada Post May 29.

Nationally renowned designer and illustrator Heather Cooper of Toronto is responsible for the design of the gardening stamp. Her personal style, recognizable by painstaking attention to detail, is clearly evident here. The stamp shows one of the most attractive features of gardening — the lush, colour-rich fusion of a garden bed of growing flowers.

Montreal designer Rolf Harder has produced an equally exciting stamp on the rehabilitation theme using the embossing process. By using this technique, the stamp takes on a three-dimensional aspect. Graphically, the stamp represents two hands, one supporting the other, to symbolize the motivating force behind rehabilitation: the idea of people helping people.

The stamps will focus attention on two notable events to take place in Canada this year, Les Florales internationales de Montreal, from May 17 to September 1 and the 14th World Congress of Rehabilitation International in Winnipeg from June 22 to 27. The Congress will be a prelude to 1981, "International Year for Disabled Persons" proclaimed by the United Nations.

The 22-million 17-cent gardening stamps and the 23-million 17-cent rehabilitation stamps will both be printed in four colour lithography on separate sheets by Ashton-Potter Limited, Toronto. The rehabilitation stamp features embossing in addition to litho printing.

The date of issue of the 35-cent postage stamp devoted to uranium resources set for 29 May 1980 has been rescheduled for release on August 27, 1980.

SENIOR LEAGUE

Monday evening was Movie time again and we viewed two very good films. "The Living Woodland" was a beautiful nature film taken in the forests of Western Europe. We saw the changing of the seasons and how it affects the forest and wildlife. It is particularly beautiful in the Spring, with the new life and growth everywhere. We saw the stages of the butterfly, heard the calling of the birds, and had a look at how the animals hunt and survive. Every living detail has a special function in the forest.

"Wayleave" was all about the oil pipeline and what is involved in the planning and construction. The strip of land where the trench is dug is called the Wayleave. The trench is dug six feet deep and the pipe is laid three feet underground. It was interesting to note that the land is left in its original state after the construction is finished.

The residents really enjoyed their evening at the Movies.

Tuesday morning Reverend Don Nicholson held an inspiring service in the chapel. I understand that Reverend Nicholson and his family will be moving to Caledonia soon. We will certainly miss them, but we wish them much happiness and success in their new place of residence.

Later on Tuesday afternoon, we were pleased to welcome Mrs. Alvira Binks to Hyland Crest. Mrs. Binks sang some lovely hymns, accompanied by Mrs. Norma Barron on the piano. She also showed us some slides, and shared with us her experiences working with the children of Haiti. We would like to express our appreciation to these two ladies for making our afternoon very enjoyable.

Wednesday we had our regular fun and fitness program in the morning and crafts in the afternoon. Later on in the evening the choir from the Allsaw Mission came and sang some familiar gospel hymns for us. Everyone enjoyed their singing very much.

The M.A.R.C. wives brought a delicious assortment of muffins and cheese for the Thursday Tea Party. Thank you ladies for a very pleasant afternoon.

Thursday evening is Bingo night at Hyland Crest, and the Kinsmen were here to call the numbers and assist the residents. I understand there were quite a few lucky winners.

Friday afternoon we were delighted to have Grace Coburn back with us to lead the sing song. It was also a pleasure to have Norma Baron here to play the piano for us. Singing along with Grace is always a nice way to end a week of activity at Hyland Crest.

AROUND THE TOWN

We hear that another World Leader has died, Tito of Yugoslavia, a very strong man and an excellent statesman.

There was a Card Party on April 28 at the Orange Lodge Hall beside the United Church by the L.O.B.A., and winners were lone hands Bill Elcome and Mary Cox, Hilda Harrison, George Hewitt and Gordon Kellett. After the games all enjoyed a social half hour and the delicious lunch served by the ladies. There will be the final Card Games of this spring at the hall on May 26.

We saw some of the OPP staff on CHEX T.V. last week, and some views of our village. These men try to keep order and it must be difficult with their large territory, and larger population in the summer months.

What is a mother? She's kind like no other; Stern when need be But yet your pain she can see. Mine has long been gone, But I feel her wishes yet; I'm never ever alone For her memory I'll never forget.

We noticed that this is

Hi! Wasn't it a lovely weekend? All except those awful black flies. Oh well, guess we can't have everything.

The roads sure are busy, so take care while driving, it's going to be like this and worse for the rest of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt were visiting with Steve and Betty Fox.

Frank Miles was up to his cottage on the weekend. Guess most cottages will be open before the holiday Education Week and this is the time you should take an extra interest in your children's schooling.

Society B-B-Q Dinner from 7-9 at the Arena and dancing to Misty River Ramblers after 9.

I know how mothers learn the tender touch,

Of tiny fists and bodies soft and warm Because I held a child against my heart, Safe from the storm.

I know all this because I am a part

Of life's vast show - this street and church and store,

A scarlet trillium, the sight of springtime bells,

My Mother coming quickly to the door.

A grand weekend, with sunny skies, and many visitors to our county and now the black flies. Drive carefully. Cheerio until next time.

Herb Roodenburg is off on a 5 day canoe trip to Algonquin Park, with a group from the Haliburton High School, including 2 adults. If this weather stays it should be a beautiful outing.

Ted & Shirley Dunsford from Newmarket were visiting with Frank and Anne Dunsford on the weekend. Sorry that Anne has been under the weather all week, hope she is feeling much spryer soon.

Heard about Mrs. Janet Smith being in Hospital and having to undergo open heart surgery soon. Our prayers are with her.

Hint of the week - Food cooked in a double boiler will cook more quickly if a little salt is added to the water in the lower pot.

Take it easy now. God bless till next time.

A Penny's Worth

by Yvonne Penney

This past week-end saw many of our summer visitors spending the weekend at their cottages. I would like to extend a welcome to all of these spring visitors to our county.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McCann of Kennisses Lake, Mrs. Esther Morgan of Calgary and the Misses Ada and Isabelle Gibbs have returned home from visiting their sister, Mrs. Phyllis Howarth in Smyrna, Delaware, U.S.A. I was speaking to Isabelle and she said that they had a terrific trip.

Thursday, May 15th, the Scouts' 4th Festival of Fun will be held at the Haliburton High School. The program starts at 7:30 p.m. and will continue until 10 p.m. From what I hear, there will be much talent in evidence, such as the Guild Choir, Gymnastics by the High School Students, a couple of bands as well as many other attractions. Admission to the evening is free, however, a collection will be taken to help the Haliburton County Chapter of the Association for Children With Learning Disabilities. Come on out and support the scouting movement.

There will be a public meeting of the Association for Children With Learning Disabilities at the high school on Thursday, May 22. The swim program at PineStone Inn, sponsored by this group, concluded last week with a wind-up party for the children involved as well as the parents and the volunteer swimming instructors and helpers. The meeting on the 22nd will take the form of a discussion with parents in the hope that a follow-up program can be organized to benefit these children throughout the summer school holiday. If your child is one with a learning disability, please plan to attend this meeting.

Hazel Titus spent some time in a Peterborough hospital last week undergoing tests but is back home again now.

Between fifty and sixty neighbours gathered at the United Church hall here last Friday evening to surprise Sandra Barnhart with a miscellaneous bridal shower. She received many beautiful and useful gifts and was most appreciative of every one.

Ross and Muriel Harrison arrived home from the south last week and Blanche and Maurice Windsor arrived home to-day (Monday). Welcome back folks.

Gord Allcorn, his son Phil and family spent the week-end at Gord's home here.

Royce Harrison, who has spent the winter at Hyland Crest in Minden, has returned to his home and is looking very fit.

Our Carnarvon Cubs and Scouts were busy last Saturday planting trees at the Stanhope Airport. I sponsored one of our boys and he planted 100 trees so I guess I'd better be ready to pay up this weekend.

In 1982 the Minden, Carnarvon and Maple Lake Pastoral Charge of the United Church will celebrate 120 years of Pastoral ministry here. We are looking for pictures of old churches, now closed, and pictures of the people who were leaders in the churches. Please contact Rev. Douglas Miller is you have any such pictures or pertinent information.

Leroy Eager has assumed ownership of Welch's Food Town at Maple Lake again.

I enjoyed the article in last week's paper concerning our local Ontario Provincial Police Department. We welcome Sgt. Bailey and his new officers to the county.

About thirty ladies are participating in the Fitness Course at the Stanhope Firehall Wednesday evenings under the capable leadership of Mary Bell, owner of our new Hair Care Salon and I for one am finding it very beneficial.

Our public and high school students are enjoying school trips these days and it won't be long until they are writing final exams and then enjoying summer vacation.

Letters from Lorraine

Lorraine Perry is an Ingoltsby high school student who is spending a year in Belgium as part of an exchange program sponsored by Rotary International and the Minden Rotary Club.

Her family has agreed to share some of her experiences overseas through the letters she sends home. The following letter was written March 21.

Well, it was back to school today. Everyone in school asked if mommy had gotten home safely. (Lorraine's mother visited with her in Belgium in early March). It was extremely cold for this time of the year, (0 degrees) especially since it is the first day of spring.

This evening I went out to sort of a variety night celebrating the first day of spring. It was presented by the students of Fleures of all ages. It included songs, plays, take-offs on television shows and other things. It was really an enjoyable evening. The skits and plays were very comical.

Today, after school, it snowed. The wet and rainy kind that didn't last long.

Ricky (another exchange student) phoned this morning and asked me to go to Austria skiing with him. I said no, I was going to be busy during the holidays. I will be going to Spain with my family. He also invited me to go to Italy with him in May. He really thinks he's going places.

Today I went to Namur to do some summer shopping. I found the summer shoes I was looking for.

March 27

Tomorrow we will be leaving for Spain. We depart from Liege Belgium. The car has to be on the train by 4 p.m. and we have to be on board by 6 p.m. My two host sisters will be travelling with their grandmother on a separate train while I will be travelling with my host parents and their son.

Several days ago I went to a party for an American friend, Elizabeth Aclair. Yesterday at school we didn't do anything because it was my "departing party" and Francoise's birthday so we did absolutely nothing at all. We ate cakes, cookies and drank. The class gave me a doll that resembles Pierrot, a doll with tears running down its cheeks. We had a great time singing and laughing, etc.

I gave out more flag pins and my address to everyone. I also received a scarf, pin, bottle of perfume, some post cards of Fleures, a plaque, a pen and money holder was presented to me by the principal on behalf of the school. It was a very sad day for me to be leaving. I will visit them again.

March 29

Yesterday we left for Liege. The train left that town at 6:30 - a half hour late, of course. The five of us had to be split up into two cabins. We ate a picnic dinner on the train. All of the train cars were sleepers, 18 of them altogether, so it made for a long train. We travelled through Luxembourg and Lyon, France. In the morning we had a "box" factory-made breakfast and then the train arrived in Nerbonne in the southeast corner of France.

I should explain how this train-car system works.

Passengers drive their cars to the train station in Belgium, with suitcases and everything in it. The vehicle is loaded onto a special train car and the passengers ride in regular compartments. It saves gasoline, eliminates the need for a hotel for the one night and driver doesn't have to drive. Last night, for example, we travelled 1000 km by train and slept through 800 of them. Since it is now the Easter school break the train was packed. Many people find it easier to travel with kids on the train rather than in the car.

The other train from Brussels arrived later that morning and we met the others who were to travel with us in the car. I found the south of France to be quite different from what I saw near Paris. The countryside is more rolling and the hills are covered with vineyards. It is so beautiful to see. The houses are of a different style and many of the village use reddish-orange-pinkish bricks which really make the country look nice.

From Nerbonne, we drove to Carcassonne, an ancient fortified city that dates back to the middle ages. Carcassonne is a closed city and was always the local centre for the military, religious and civil authorities. It is the biggest fortress in Europe.

Carcassonne also has five other fort castles located at inaccessible summits in the area. We took a detailed guided tour of the fortress. The guide explained the history and the changes that had taken place in the fortress.

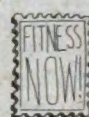

We drive to our hotel called La Ferme de Requet. It was nicely situated in the woods near a lake. It used to be an old farm but was changed to hotel-restaurant-disco. I had a nice big double bed in my room and a porch outside.

We had a delicious dinner - soup, ham-pork stew, chocolate mousse. The weather was warm, just like summer. The temperature had been about 25 degrees Celsius and the sky is blue all the time. I've finally got some sun on my face - does it ever feel good.

I am having an excellent time. My new "family" is very kind. Please say hello to everyone for me.

Art Ward, owner and operator of Wig-a-mog Inn on Lake Kashagawigamog, has been elected chairman of Tourism Ontario for 1980-81. The organization is a federation of hospitality and travel associations in the province and is involved in the development of tourism. Art has been active in travel promotion in Ontario through a number of organizations including Resorts Ontario, the local Chamber of Commerce among others.

Truck found

The 1978 Blazer truck stolen from the Haliburton Red and White store parking lot was recovered May 1 near Fishtail Lake.

The vehicle had been missing since April 23 when the truck was taken from the store's parking lot late in the afternoon. Several Haliburton residents reported seeing the truck in that community that day, but it wasn't seen again until May 1 when it was found at the lake in Harcourt Township.

Police report that the vehicle was parked under a pine tree just off a logging road at the south end of the lake. The right door had a large dent and the aerial had been broken off the roof of the vehicle.

Police are continuing their investigation into the matter.
